

Are you preparing your students for the responsibilities of digital citizenship?

In the time-crunched world of today's professional educator, this online ten-week course quickly gives you:

- A complete picture of digital media in classroom planning and practice
- Leading-edge and best practice strategies for using digital learning to engage your students
- Tools for mapping digital media to state and national curriculum standards
- One-of-a-kind digital media resources to use in your classroom
- Access to a global network of professional educators and digital media experts
- Certification as a Digital Media Educator from the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center
- Three hours graduate credit from the University of Cincinnati

Contact us:

For additional Information and registration for the next scheduled class:

888-325-2669

cech@uc.edu

www.cech.uc.edu

CECH
University of Cincinnati
PO Box 210002
Cincinnati, OH 45221-0002

UNIVERSITY OF
Cincinnati

*Digital Media and Inquiry:
21st Century Tools for Teaching
About Society*

National Underground Railroad FREEDOM CENTER
freedomcenter.org

College of Education, Criminal Justice, and Human Services

UNIVERSITY OF
Cincinnati

Digital Media & Inquiry: 21st Century Tools for Teaching About Society

To take advantage of the opportunities to reach today's students with technology, you need the skills to use digital media in your classroom.

This course provides the skills and knowledge to answer some very important questions about 21st Century teaching tools:

- What skills do I need to be marketable as a Digital Media Educator?
- How can I learn these skills in a way that is relevant to my students' learning needs and standards-based curriculum?
- What forms of digital media are in greatest demand by students in my classroom?
- Where can I find additional resources to support my use of digital media in the classroom?

The University of Cincinnati and National Underground Railroad Freedom Center have helped educators learn the skills today to teach today's students. And, what we hear is that the digital media and inquiry skills we teach give today's teachers a huge advantage in their classrooms.

After years of research, studying best practices in digital learning, and compiling feedback from students and educators from their classroom experiences, we have developed a quick and easy way for you to learn the most effective ways to use digital media in your classrooms - and get a certificate that proves your mastery!

Course of Study

Digital Media and Inquiry: 21st Century Tools for Teaching about Society

PRFS 778 880 - 3 graduate credit hours
10 week online course

Do you realize digital media has changed the way students learn, opening a huge opportunity for your classroom?

Digital media is consumed by students at an amazing rate. They devote 6.5 hours to digital media, and encounter more than 8 hours of media messages, each day. Students are finding creative ways to express their ideas about the world around them using digital media.

Schools see the huge potential for boosting student achievement by using technology in their instruction.

But getting the best results from using digital media in classrooms takes time and specialized skills. Schools are looking frantically for the right educators to help achieve their teaching and learning goals.

This course is offered in collaboration with the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center.

The University of Cincinnati

The University of Cincinnati is a top 25 public research university with an international reputation. UC is regionally accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. The College of Education, Criminal Justice, & Human Services is ranked in the top 100 graduate schools in education by U.S. News and World Report.

For information about programs and opportunities at the University of Cincinnati, College of Education, Criminal Justice and Human Services, please visit the website:

www.cech.uc.edu

The National Underground Railroad Freedom Center

The National Underground Railroad Freedom Center opened in August 2004 on the banks of the Ohio River in downtown Cincinnati, Ohio. The purpose of the Center is to tell the story of the struggle for freedom in the United States through exhibits and programs that focus on America's battle to rid itself of the ugly scourge of slavery and treat all its citizens with respect and dignity.

For information about programs and events at the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center please visit the website:

www.freedomcenter.org

